It was another day in Elkridge. It was a warm and sunny day. But today, were going to look at very specific people. Tweens to be exact.

It was another day for Emily and Via. But, it wouldn't be a normal day for Emily.

On the bus, Emily and Via sat together. "What do you want to do at recess?" "Tag or gravel?" "Gravel." "Do you....." "Here we are." Said Mr. Kennedy, opening the bus doors.

Emily and Via and went to their classroom . Mrs. Smith said, "Good morning Emily and Via! Oh! And good morning Jason!" "Good morning Mrs. Smith." They sat and unpacked their stuff. One by One. One by one. Then, they unstacked their chair, and looked at their morning work.

Emily and Via filled them out and turned them in. "Please come to the carpet." Said Mrs. Smith. She went through the schedule and said they could go to math.

It was recess. Emily and Via were in line. Via stepped out and ran to the playground. But when Emily steps out.....

(First person)

I woke up. It was Wednesday. Ughhh. I changed into something nice and went down stairs. Mom was there. I grabbed my backpack and ran to the bus stop. "Wait!" said mom, but it was too late. I was at the bus stop.

On the bus, me and Via sat together. "What do you want to do at recess?" "Tag or gravel?" "Gravel." "Do you....." "Here we are." Said Mr. Kennedy, opening the bus doors.

Me and Via went to our classroom. There, Mrs. Smith said, "Good morning Emily and Via! Oh! And good morning Jason!" "Good morning Mrs. Smith." I sat and unpacked my stuff. One by one. One by one. Then, I unstacked a chair, and looked at my morning work.
