

Brokenstar and Tigerstar

By: Devon C.

Introduction

Tigerstar and Brokenstar are the (mostly) main villains in the first series of Warrior Cats by Erin Hunter. In this project you will find comparisons of their actions, motives, appearance, and personality. You'd think they are very much different, only because they are in different clans. That's not at all true, as they are very much alike.

Appearance

Tigerstar is a huge brown tabby cat, as shown above. His warrior name was Tigerclaw, representing his long, sharp tigerlike claws. Brokenstar is a long haired dark tabby. His warrior name was Brokentail, because his tail is bent near the middle. A similarity is that they are both cats (duh) and they are both brown tabbies. They are both huge and are scary to smaller cats. Brokenstar has his tail bent, as Tigerstar doesn't. Tigerstar has unusually long claws and Brokenstar has shorter, sharper claws.

Personality

They are both ambitious to become leader. They would launch into battle and kill without hesitation.

Brokenstar was unflinchingly loyal to his clan, while Tigerstar would make allies from outside his clan.

Brokenstar liked to pace his clan fast, turning kits into apprentices before they hit 6 moons. He would kick out the elders of the clan because he thought they were useless. Tigerstar was patient, ready to lay out a plan that could take moons. He was a LITTLE kinder to his clan than Brokenstar and would wait 'till kits reached 6 moons before turning them into apprentices. They were both always evil though, and their ambitions would lead them to the Dark Forest when they died.

Actions and Motives

Brokenstar killed his own father at the WindClan border and blamed it on them. He did so because he would become leader after his death. He trained the smallest kits to fight in battle. He hoped to achieve becoming the most feared clan in the forest. When he died, he continued to rage upon the clans from the Dark Forest, joining with Tigerstar to recruit cats from their dreams. In the final battle, his mother killed him, banishing him from the clans forever. Tigerstar killed the deputy, hoping to take his rank. Once he did, he laid a trap and told that only Bluestar could come to the Thunderpath (road) that Cinderpaw accidentally stumbled into. He wanted to hasten his promotion to leader. He plotted with rogues and with Brokenstar and launch an attack on the camp. Fireheart uncovered his clans and he was banished from ThunderClan. He became the ShadowClan leader and laid a trail of rabbits to lure wild dogs into the ThunderClan camp. He made an alliance with Scourge, who he had battled when he was an apprentice, and Scourge destroyed all his lives with one blow. He continued to plot against the clans in the Dark Forest with Brokenstar and other evil cats. He died in the final battle against the Clans.

Conclusion

Tigerstar and Brokenstar have many similarities and differences. Brokenstar was impatient and would attack immediately if he had a chance. In the end, they were both evil and would stop at nothing to achieve their dreams.
