

Saquon and the Patriots

By: Jacob T.

(An Adaptation writing of Goldilocks and the 3 Bears)

Once upon a time there was a rookie football player named Saquon Barkley. One day he wandered into the Patriots locker room. He saw a ton of things he wanted to try like pizza, smoothies and jerseys.

Saquon ran to the pizza, took a bite and yelled "Ow!" because it was so hot. He needed a few minutes to let his mouth cool. He bit the next one. It made his teeth cold. The pizza was frozen and hadn't been cooked yet. The last one he loved. It was perfectly seasoned with bacon, sausage and had the perfect temperature.

Saquon was thirsty, so he went to get a smoothie. He tried one and it tasted horrible. It tasted like broccoli with teriyaki. The next one was way too sweet. The last smoothie was just right.

Saquon went to the equipment room. He tried on Rob Gronkowski's, jersey, which was way too big. Saquon tried on other jerseys. Danny Amendola's jersey was way too small, but Tom Brady's jersey was perfect.

The Patriots walked in and were angry when they realized that someone had eaten their food. They were even angrier when they found out someone drank their smoothies. When they realized someone had tried on their jerseys, they were furious. Someone was in one jersey and that someone was Saquon Barkley. He was so scared that it he was gone in a flash.
