

Point Of View Writing: How Purrkins Got In The Family ...

By Lily N. First Person writing!

We were trying to decide if we wanted a gray kitten, a calico kitten, or a black kitten.

“I like the calico kitten! She’s precious!” I said.

Dave said;

“I agree. She’s super cute and smart!”

The kitten was smart not to go up to them immediately and play. She wanted to know them better first.

So, we went to talk to a worker in the store at a check-out line.

“Excuse me, but we’d like to get the calico kitten, please,” I said. The cashier, Kelsey, gave a happy expression. Almost too nice to be real.

“Sure. I’ll contact her owner as soon as I can.” Kelsey said.

Then she said;

“That’ll be 4,000 gems please.”

(Gems = Money)

“OK, I’ll write a check.”

I said. Then I wrote a check, and gave it to Kelsey.

“Have a nice day!” Kelsey said.
“Thank you!” Said Dave, as we walked out the door. We got in the car, Dave driving, and I was sitting beside him.
“When will we be getting her?” Dave asked me.
“I’ll check my email when I get home.” I said. Then, as soon as we got home, I got on my computer, checked my email, and saw that we should be getting the kitten at 11:00 am on the next Monday.

1 week later, on Monday . . .

The kitten’s owner was waiting by the door for me. She told me advice for taking care of the kitten. I had one of my four kids with me. Ivy. The others were at school. Then, after the lady put Ann Purrkins into the carrier, (Our future kitty’s name) We left, waiting to surprise the other kids who were at school that day. . .

Point Of View Writing: How Purrkins Got In The Family . . .

By Lily N. Omniscient Writing!

Dave and Becca were trying to decide whether they wanted to get a gray kitten, a calico kitten or a black kitten. Dave kind-of liked the gray kitten because it was unique, but the calico kitten was unique too! He had a hard time deciding. Becca on the other hand, was loving the calico kitten. The kitten was smart not to immediately go play. She wanted to know the people better first. Becca said;

“I like the calico kitten! She’s precious!”

Dave thought the same.

“I agree! She’s super cute and smart!”

So, Dave and Becca set off to talk to a worker. “Excuse me, but we’d like to get the calico kitten.” Becca said. The cashier, Kelsey, gave a happy expression on her face. Almost too nice to be real.

“Sure. I’ll contact her owner as soon as I can.” Kelsey said.

Then she said;

“That’ll be 4,000 gems please.”

(Gems = Money)

“OK, I’ll write a check.”

Said Becca. Then she did. She gave it to Kelsey, and she said;

“Have a nice day!”

“Thankyou!” Said Dave, as they walked out the door. They got in the car. Dave was driving, and Becca was in shotgun.

“When will we get her?” Dave asked Becca, keeping his eyes focused on the road. “I’ll check my email as soon as we get home.” Becca responded.

When they got home, Becca got on her computer and saw that they were getting the kitten at 11:00 am on the next Monday.

1 week later, on that Monday . . .

The kitten's old owner was waiting for Becca at the door of the store. She told Becca advice of taking care of the kitten. Becca had one of her 4 kids with her. It was Ivy. The annoying one. Then the lady put Ann purrkins (The kittens name in the future) in the kitty carrier. They soon left, ready to surprise the other 3 kids that were at school . . .

The End Of The Story!!!

