

Peter Pan and the Ostentatious Boys

(An adaptation of Peter Pan)

By: Sam L.

In the big town of Alwaysland all the people had houses, big or small, but only one mansion was located in Alwaysland and this mansion belonged to the Ostentatious Boys and Peter

Pan. The one thing that made the big town of Alwaysland different from anywhere else was how fast the kids were forced to mature. As soon as they turned four they get a job. A real job like a doctor. I know what you're thinking, "This is the craziest thing ever!" but that's just how life was for the people of Alwaysland. And after all, they got used to it. All of the Ostentatious boys were five to eight years old, including Peter Pan, so they all worked. They ran their own company selling iPads and phones so they got very rich. Everyone except Peter Pan didn't mind going to work everyday to make electronics, but Peter hated it. He was only eight and he wanted to act like a kid. He wanted to play and have fun. So one day he told the Ostentatious Boys he was sick so he could skip work and go on an adventure. He thought about walking to another town so he could be a real kid all the time, but he didn't want to leave the Ostentatious Boys. And the next town was sixty miles away, so there was no way in history, he thought, he would be able to walk to another town with no food or water. He decided he would walk a bit and then head back to his house and pretend he was sick. Peter walked for a very, very long time thinking about random stuff and forgetting about his plan to only walk a bit. Then he heard voices. They weren't ordinary voices though, they were more like angry yells and chants. He went closer to investigate and found something very weird. He saw what looked like two huge pirate ships! When he got even closer the chants were so loud he had to cover his ears. They were chanting, "GET THE CLOCKS, GET THE CLOCKS!" Their chanting was so loud that his whole body vibrated. Then he took five more steps and he was on the ship. Someone grabbed him so tight he couldn't fight him off, so tight he thought he might lose all the circulation in his body. The man that was holding him had a dirty white long sleeve shirt, tan pants that only went down to his shins, tall boots, and what looked to be a bandana. The man wasn't that tall but he was very strong. Then a tall man with a curly moustache, red shirt with gold buttons, and a black pirate hat appeared. In each of his hands was a clock. He turned his head straight down and looked into Peter's eyes. "My name is Captain Hand, I have two beautiful hands and millions of beautiful clocks. Most pirates count their success by how much gold, jewels, and ships they steal. Boy, I count my success a much better way. I count it by how many clocks I steal and that leads me to this question. Do you have any clocks with you?" Peter knew he had his phone which obviously had a clock, but that was a special gift from the Ostentatious boys so it was very special to him. But just then Captain Hand pulled out a sword and Peter knew what was going to happen if he didn't give him his phone, so he reached in his pocket and pulled out his phone. The man that was holding him let go. Peter knew if he ran away they would chase him and possibly do something worse than steal his phone. But then Captain Hand dropped his sword, took the phone and said, "This is the most amazing clock I have ever seen! It can even turn off and on! YOU HEAR THAT MATEYS! IT CAN TURN OFF AND ON AND CAN EASILY FIT IN ME POCKET! Thank you, Peter! Oh, and here's something for you since you gave me this wonderful clock!" Captain Hand handed Peter a very beautiful clock, the most beautiful clock Peter had ever seen. It was blue and silver with shiny gold stars on the face, and on the outside it had two beautiful blue bells. “Wow thanks this is, wow, such a beautiful clock,” Peter said. “You’re welcome matey,” said Captain Hand. “Now off you go back to where you came from.” Peter ran off the ship and all the way back to his mansion, carrying the clock very carefully to make sure it didn’t fall. When he got back to his house he realized how much he hated making phones. Then he realized how much he would like to start his own business making clocks. He decided that when the Ostentatious boys came back from work he would tell them about his plan to start a business making clocks. Later, that’s what he did. The Ostentatious Boys agreed, so he started his clock business. Before long, he had the biggest business in town and he loved working to make clocks. Everyone lived happily ever after.

The end