

The Tiny Bottle

By Sua C.

[“All-Knowing” Omniscient]

One hot summer day in Sunshine City, there were two 15 years old best friends. Maddison and Jessica. Those 2 are actually identical twins[Not by blood but by friendship]. When their parents and siblings see them together they often call them the wrong name. Anyways they were at a picnic together, taking selfies, talking about how they love each other’s outfit, and enjoying the weather. But suddenly when they were on like, their 100th selfie, there was a bottle; a tiny bottle that fell out of the sky. Both were sure that it was something very special. Jessica was sure that it was pixie dust while Maddison was sure that it was a key and a map to somewhere very unique was inside the bottle. Maddison told Jessica what she thought and Jessica told her what she thought. Hearing each other thoughts made them feel very curious about what was in it. Jessica and Maddison took turns on opening the teeny tiny bottle.

The cap would not budge. It was very odd to the girls. Maddison was very good at mysteries like this. She took the bottle to the nearest sink and washed it. She had dried it with her t-shirt and quickly yelled “Jessie!!! Come quick!!!!!!” Jessica ran with her phone and came very puzzled. “I think that this is just a charm.” As she pulled the sticker she discovered off, it said "Keychain from Michaels". The girls were very flustered. Jessica did not want it so Maddison kept it safely in her very cute purse. The girls kept it a secret to everyone but themselves and enjoyed the rest of the day at the picnic with no more funny events.

The End

The Tiny Bottle

By Sua C.

[First Person]

One hot summer day in my hometown, Sunshine City, me and my best friend Jessica were enjoying the weather. My name is Maddison Cocoa. We are actually identical twins[not by blood but by friendship]. When our parents and siblings see us together they often call us the wrong name.

Anyways, Jessica and I were at a picnic together, taking selfies, talking about how we absolutely love each other's outfit, and enjoying the weather[like normal, our city's weather is very nice 365 days a year!!!!]. But suddenly when we were on our 100th selfie, there was a bottle; a tiny bottle that fell out of the sky. We were sure that it was something very special. I was sure that it was a key and a map to somewhere very unique was inside the bottle. Jessica told what she thought to me. Pixie Dust is what Jessica thinks. Hearing her thoughts made me feel very curious about what was in it. Jessica and I took turns on opening the teeny tiny bottle.

The cap would not budge. It was very odd to me because we both are really strong girls. I am really good at mysteries like this so I took the bottle to the nearest sink and washed it. I dried it with my really cute t-shirt and I quickly yelled "Jessie!!! Come quick!!!!!!!" Jessica ran with her phone and came very puzzled. "I think that this is just a charm." As I pulled on the sticker I discovered off, it said "Keychain from Michaels". Jessica and I were very flustered. Jessica did not want it so I kept it safely in my cute purse. We kept it a secret to everyone what happened but ourselves and enjoyed the rest of the day at the picnic with no more funny events.

The End